In today's highly connected world, cybersecurity is a leadership obligation. Cybersecurity leadership building trust in the digital age prepares executives, managers, and future leaders with the mindset and strategies necessary to guide their organizations through one of the most urgent challenges of our time. Blending technical insights with leadership wisdom, Dr. Christina Asare examines how modern leaders must prepare for cyber threats, manage legal and regulatory risks, and foster confidence under pressure. Using real-world examples and best practices, this book highlights why cybersecurity requires the active involvement of HR, legal, finance, and executive teams. Not just how to anticipate legal and regulatory obligations including data privacy compliance and breach reporting, the strategic steps leaders must take in the aftermath of a cyber incident, the psychology of leading under attack, managing stress, guiding teams, and maintaining organizational trust, practical approaches for building resilience, cultivating trust, and driving continuous improvement. Whether you are a C-suite executive, program manager, IT leader, or business owner, this book will help you integrate cybersecurity into your leadership style and position your organization to succeed against evolving threats.
